Historical Note:

Warner Foote Gookin (WFG), 1882-1953, was a retired clergyman and Martha's Vineyard (formerly Dukes County) Historical Society historian. WFG graduated from Columbia University in 1902 and then attended the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, MA. For the next two years he lived in Europe and studied German. In 1908 he was ordained and became the canon of Trinity Church in Pittsburgh. He was appointed Vicar of the Church of Accession. His teaching career began in 1928 at the Avon Old Farm School for Boys where he taught English and German until he retired in 1944 because of a heart condition.

A life-long summer resident on East Chop, WFG spent his last years on Martha's Vineyard, 1944-1953, researching the life of Bartholomew Gosnold. He took on the task of clearing up misconceptions about Gosnold's voyage in 1602. WFG engaged academics and non-academics about the history of Martha's Vineyard by means of several letters, editorials and articles. A sailor himself, WFG deciphered readings and by careful induction was able to lead us day by day, league by league, from Gosnold's ship Concord's first landfall on the upper arm of the Cape, round the end of the Cape, circling Nantucket, and back up through Muskeget Channel (between Nantucket and Martha's Vineyard). He died before he could complete his final manuscript on Gosnold. Ten years after WFG's death in 1953, Philip L. Barbour, who co-authored Bartholomew Gosnold: Discoverer and Planter with WFG, took on the task of editing Gookin's manuscript and put it into publishable form under the sponsorship of The Duke's County Historical Society.

Scope and Content Note:

The Warner F. Gookin (WFG) Papers are the result of WFG's research as an historian during his retirement on Martha's Vineyard from 1944 until his death in early 1953. His records include extraordinarily detailed research on Bartholomew Gosnold's voyage from England to America in 1602, Gosnold genealogy, deeds, journals and maps of that era, and interaction with the Island natives, (which also subsequently covered Thomas Mayhew's role in converting many Native Americans to Christianity in that same period). Large portions of the collection are dedicated to Gosnold's genealogy and Gosnold's voyage from England and route around Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard, and the Elizabeth Islands. There are also extensive notes on Indian vocabulary and translations of photostatted deeds from the 1600s.

WFG's primary ambition or goal seemed to be to clear up "misconceptions" about Gosnold's voyage. In many of his letters, articles, and research notes he points out what he views as inaccuracies, prejudices, and other such "blunders" in earlier historians' (primarily Banks') points of view, lack of documentation, and statements on the history of Gosnold's voyage and Martha's Vineyard. His extensive research on Gosnold was put into manuscript form entitled "Bartholomew Gosnold: A Founder of America," but was not published until after his death. WFG also conducted detailed analysis of Native American [Indian] languages of New England and of Cape Cod and the Island particularly, creating vocabulary lists and identifying place names of the area. This also tied in with the study of Gosnold's voyage in helping to establish where precisely Gosnold and his crew traveled.
