Historical Note
Beriah Norton was born on January 12, 1733 in the village of Edgartown, Massachusetts on the island of Martha’s Vineyard. His chief occupation was that of a farmer. Mr. Norton married Ann Frances Cosen on December 15, 1757.

Despite his humble social standing, Norton did gain assume the position of Colonel in the Island’s colonial militia. During the American Revolution, Colonel Norton remained in his post as colonel in the coastal defense force. During the war, the Island remained largely neutral since it was dependent on the British navy for its security and prosperity. In 1778, the British army, under the command of Major General Charles Grey, traversed the east coast of the American colonies in search of supplies for the royal army.

A squadron of British ships stopped at the island of Martha’s Vineyard for provisions. At the time, the Island was largely known for its sheep farming and fishing. For Island residents, this event is known as Grey’s Raid. Grey’s Raid was given that name because General Grey of the British Royal Army was the commander of the operation to obtain supplies. The British commander sent a message to Island residents to provide provisions to the army and not to resist. The commander did warn Island residents of the consequences of resistance.

Colonel Norton was put in charge of supplying the British with the provisions that they required. According to Norton, the British agreed to pay back to the people of Martha’s Vineyard for the supplies that they stole. General Grey’s account is altogether different and says that he made no such agreement with Norton. Colonel Norton, after the war, went to plead his case in both New York City and England, in front of Parliament without any luck. Beriah Norton traveled to England three times in an effort to receive reparations. Yet, he was never successful in receiving funds. As a result, his failure to obtain reparations hurt his social standing within the community.

Norton remained on the Vineyard for the rest of his life, but his financial situation steadily declined. Beriah Norton was a prominent figure in the workings of the town of Edgartown. He held various town, county, state, and federal offices. Beriah Norton died on December 4, 1820.

Scope and Content Note
The Beriah Norton collection consists of over 100 documents and ranges in date from the 1760s to the early 1800s. These documents are related to the life of Beriah Norton, his involvement with the British during Grey’s Raid during the American Revolution, to legal documents and other items relating to the town of Edgartown, especially those concerning Norton’s involvement in town affairs and other business. There are also documents that concern requests and requisitions made both by Beriah Norton and to Beriah Norton. There is also a miscellaneous series in the collection.

Accompanying the Grey’s Raid documents are several items acquired by Arthur Railton for the Martha’s Vineyard Historical Society’s Intelligencer from the University of Michigan’s library concerning Grey’s Raid. Railton used these documents as the basis for an Intelligencer article. They are copies of accounts from Sir Henry Clinton and Beriah Norton.

This is a complete document list that has been included in the collection. This list organizes the documents chronologically from earliest to most recent. It provides a description of each document as well. Several deeds relating to Beriah Norton can be found in the deed box, 131B.
