New England / Massachusetts

Region	Title	Date	Description	Object ID	Location
New England / Massachusetts	Novi Belgii in America Septentrionali	circa 1757	Map of New Netherland and New England that was created by Tobias Conrad Lotter, a German cartographer. Martha's Vineyard is identified as Vlielant ats Natocke. Nantucket is identified as Texel ats Elisabeths Eylant. The illustration in the lower right is of New York, which was formerly New Amsterdam. Fort James, marked 'C' in this illustration, is where Thomas Mayhew and Matthew Mayhew met with Francis Lovelace in 1671 to obtain charters for the Vineyard townships.	1944.044	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 9
New England / Massachusetts	Town boundaries in coastal Massachusetts	undated	Map of coastal Massachusetts and eastern Rhode Island that shows county names, town names, and town boundaries. It also identifies islands, bays, harbors, points, shoals, lighthouses, bridges, and a monument in Lexington. Hand-drawn in color.	1983.013.015	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 1
New England / Massachusetts	An exact map of New England and New York	1702	Map of New England and New York that shows the names of towns, islands, rivers, and bays. It was published in Cotton Mather's "Magnalia Christi Americana".	1986.034	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 1
New England / Massachusetts	Map of coastal New England and New York	1680	Map of coastal New England and New York that was created by William Hack for Walter Younge Barronet and one of the commissioners for the King of England. It shows the names of towns, rivers, and islands. Martha's Vineyard on this map is labeled as Martins Vinyard.	1986.034.004	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 9
New England / Massachusetts	Coastal Massachusetts	1634	Map of coastal Massachusetts that was used as a frontispiece in "New England's Prospect", by William Wood. The book was written by Wood upon his return to England after spending 1629-1633 in America. The book was intended for prospective settlers. The map shows the names of rivers, bays, ponds, and harbors. It also shows the towns that were settled during the Great Migration of the 1630s, which brought over about 20,000 people, most of them Puritans, to live near the coast and rivers (Plymouth Colony was founded in 1620 by Pilgrims, and Massachusetts Bay Colony was established in Boston in 1630). One of the settlers was Thomas Mayhew, who arrived in 1631 and lived in Watertown for ten years before purchasing Martha's Vineyard. While Martha's Vineyard is not explicitly shown on the map, the Elizabeth Islands are shown in an unusual, octopus-like shape.	1986.034.005	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 1
New England / Massachusetts	Map of southeast New England	1774	Map of the Boston area, Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket, and Rhode Island by cartographer Thomas Jefferys for the Prince of Wales. New England / Massachusetts	New Netherland and New England	1661	Map of the coastal region for New England, New York, and New Jersey. The original map was created by Anton Francesco Lucini, an Italian engraver and printmaker, and published in "Dell'Arcano del Mare". Martha's Vineyard and Nantucket are joined on the map as Texel and Vlicklante.	1986.034.011	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 9

New England / Massachusetts	Bowle's New Pocket Map of New England	1780	Map of New England that shows the names of colonies, counties, townships, towns, major roads, islands, capes, bays, and rivers. Boundary disputes between New England colonies and New York began with 1600s charter descriptions and finally ended with the determination of the Massachusetts border in 1899. This map was issued as one of many efforts to fix boundaries. Martha's Vineyard (Kapawok, Dukes County) was copied from a much earlier map, and the whole map depends on the Conrad Lotter version series. This slightly later work, by the use of color, corrects the earlier error, restoring Martha's Vineyard to Massachusetts.	1986.034.012	Flat Files Cabinet 2 Drawer 2
New England / Massachusetts	Novi Belgii	circa 1684	Map of northeast Atlantic coast that is a copy of a map created by Nicholaus Visscher.
